

Contents

Foreword	1
Preface	2
Acknowledgements.	3
Hypothetical Statements.	5
1. Gender Perspectives of Development Theories, Feminist Theories and Concepts	9
1.1. Historical Development Theories	9
a. Social Theory	9
b. Modernization Theory	15
c. Dependency Theory	18
d. World Systems Theory	28
e. State Theory	29
f. Theory of Uneven and Combined Development	30
g. Development Economics Theories	30
1.2. Socio-Cultural Evolution	36
a. Classical Social Evolutionism	38
b. Stadial Theory	38
c. Socio-Cultural Evolutionism and the Concept of Progress	40
d. Contemporary Discourse over Socio-Cultural Evolution	46
e. Critique and Impact on Modern Theories	47
1.3. Modern Theories	48
a. Neo-Evolutionism	50
b. Theory of Post-Industrial Society	54
1.4. Social Progress	58
a. Marxism	59

b. Modernism	59
c. Post-Modernism and Social Progress.	60
d. Contemporary Trends of Thought about Social Progress . .	61
1.5. Social Engineering and Political System	62
a. Social Engineering	62
b. Political System	62
c. Public Interest and Common Good/Interest	65
1.6. Economic System.	69
a. Basic Types of Economic Systems	70
b. Division of Economic Systems.	70
1.7. Industrial Society	74
1.8. Post-Industrial Society	75
1.9. Globalization	80
1.10. Hypothetical Statements	106
2. Gender, Division of Labour and Agricultural Resources . . .	109
2.1. Gender Stereotyped Division of Labour in Agricultural Production	109
2.2. Role-Change in Gender Stereotyped Division of Labour in Agricultural Production.	110
2.3. Intersection of Gender and Accessibility to Agricultural Resources.	111
2.4. Characteristic Features of Agricultural Resources in Nigeria .	111
2.5. Hypothetical Statements	113
3. Gender and Agricultural Policy and Budget.	115
3.1. The Concept of Policy	115
3.2. Gender Responsive Agricultural Policy (GRAP)	115
3.3. The Concept of Budget	116

3.4. Importance of Government Budget	116
3.5. Principles for Effective Gender Responsive Budget.	118
3.6. Purposes for Gender Responsive Budget	119
3.7. Gender Responsive Agricultural Budget (GRAB).	121
3.8. Hypothetical Statements	123
4. Gender and Agricultural Technology	125
4.1. The Concept of Technology.	125
4.2. Gender Responsive Agricultural Technologies (GRAT).	126
4.3. Cross National/Boarder Transfer of Agricultural Technologies	127
4.4. The Concept of Appropriate Technology	130
4.5. Appropriate Technology and Agricultural Development	132
4.6. Phases of Technological Change	138
4.7. Consequences of Adopting New Technology into a Society.	140
4.8. Women's Associations as Agents, Channels and Targets for Effective Agricultural Technological Change	142
4.9. Hypothetical Statements	149
5. Gender and Agricultural Development Programs	151
5.1. Adopted Policy Approaches to Women Development in Nigeria	151
5.2. Women Empowerment Framework	154
5.3. Women in Development (WID) Movement in Nigeria	159
5.4. Gender and Community Based Associations' Participation in Rural Development Programs in Nigeria	163

5.5. Theoretical Background to the Culture of Self Organization among Women in Rural Areas of Nigeria	167
5.6. Contributions of Women's Associations to Rural Development in Nigeria	177
5.7. Hypothetical Statements	185
6. Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) and Gender Responsive Extension Service	187
6.1. A Value-added Extension Approach	187
6.2. Approaches for a Gender Sensitive Extension Outreach Program	187
6.3. Gender Responsive Principles for Mutual Interaction between Extension Agents and Rural Dwellers	188
6.4. Gender Responsive Strategy for Packaging Agricultural Innovations	190
6.5. Characteristic Features of Gender Responsive Strategy for Packaging Innovations for Farmers' Adoption	190
6.6. Adoption of Gender Responsive ICT in Extension Service: Introduction to PROGIS Software	191
6.7. Significance of ICT for Effective Extension Service in Developing Countries.	196
6.8. Hypothetical Statements	197
7. Gender Responsive Research Methodology (GRRM) in Agriculture and Rural Development Studies	199
7.1. The Scientific Method of Investigation in Social Sciences . .	199
7.2. Principles Guiding Gender Responsive Research Methodology	206

Contents

7.3. Quantitative Research Methodology	206
a. Sampling in Quantitative Research	209
b. Measurement in Quantitative Research.	211
c. Statistics in Quantitative Research	220
7.4. Qualitative Research Methodology	221
a. Differences between Qualitative and Quantitative Research	222
b. Validation in Qualitative Research	223
c. Qualitative Data Collection	224
d. References and Further Readings	247
d.a. Postmodern Critical Theory	290
e. Hypothetical Statements	331
8. Gender, Meal/Food Security/Sovereignty and Agriculture . .	333
8.1. The Concepts of Meal/Food Security/Sovereignty	333
8.2. Overview of Global Situation of Meal /Food Security/Sovereignty	334
8.3. Gendered Arrangements in Meal/Food Security/Sovereignty in Nigeria.	340
8.4. Cultural Diversity and Meal Diversity in Nigeria	341
8.5. Rural Poverty and Meal/Food Security/Sovereignty in Nigeria	341
8.6. Rural Households' Meal Security and Sustainable Rural Development in Nigeria	341
8.7. Hypothetical Statements	343
9. Gender, Environment and Rural Development	345
9.1. The Concepts of Gender and Environment	345
9.2. The Concept of Sustainable Livelihood	346
9.3. The Concept of Sustainable Development	348

9.4. Ecology	348
9.5. Ecological Systems Theory	352
9.6. Human Ecology	355
9.7. Human Ecological Theory	356
9.8. Gender and Human Ecology	362
9.9. Climate Change as an Environmental Phenomenon	364
9.10. Gender Perspective of the Impact of Climate Change on Agriculture	371
9.11. Coping and Adaptation Strategies Adopted by Nigerian Farmers to Curb the Negative Consequences of Climate Change	374
9.12. Gender, Climate Change and Rural Development.	375
9.13. Biotechnologies, Climate Change and Women Farmers' Empowerment	385
9.14. Guiding Principles for Effective On-Farm Grain Storage . . .	387
9.15. Features of Gender Responsive On-Farm Post Harvest Technologies	388
9.16. Hypothetical statements	395