

Contents

I	Introduction	13
II	Economics of Political Selection	17
1	Two complementary views: sanctioning and selection	17
1.1	Political sanctioning	17
1.2	Political selection	18
2	Which institutions impact political selection?	20
2.1	Pay for politicians	21
2.2	Electoral rules and parties	25
3	Direct professional interest representation in politics	26
3.1	Businessmen in politics	27
3.2	Lawyers in politics	29
4	Discussion	31
III	Selection of Public Servants into Politics: A First Pass	35
1	Introduction	35
2	The rationale and some history behind (in)compatibility regimes	36
2.1	A short recapitulation of (in)compatibility regimes	37
2.2	Selection effects of incompatibility rules	38
3	Empirical analysis for the political selection of public servants	39
3.1	Data	39
3.2	Results	41
4	Consequences for political outcomes	47
4.1	The trade-off between conflicts of interest and competence	47
4.2	Empirical analysis	49
5	Concluding remarks	53
IV	Theory and Evidence on the Determinants in Germany	55
1	Introduction	55
2	Theoretical considerations	57
2.1	Ineligibility and incompatibility of public service with a parliamentary mandate	57
2.2	The cost-benefit calculus of running for political office	58
2.3	Public servants as voters	63
3	Empirical analysis	64
3.1	Data	64
3.2	Results	69
4	Concluding remarks	74

V	Consequences for Legislative Oversight	77
1	Introduction	77
2	Theoretical considerations	79
2.1	Relevance of parliamentary oversight	79
2.2	Incentives for parliamentary oversight	80
2.3	Public servants as legislators	81
2.4	Additional determinants of parliamentary oversight	82
2.5	Hypotheses on parliamentary oversight	84
3	Institutional background	85
4	Empirical analysis	86
4.1	Data	86
4.2	Results	89
5	Concluding remarks	97
VI	Consequences for Employment in the Ministerial Bureaucracy	99
1	Introduction	99
2	Theoretical considerations	100
2.1	Political partisanship	101
2.2	Political patronage	101
2.3	Political selection of public servants	102
3	Empirical analysis	103
3.1	Data	103
3.2	Estimation strategy and empirical results	105
4	Concluding remarks	114
VII	Conclusions	115
1	Summary	115
2	Implications for constitutional choice	117
3	Implications for economic research	119
	References	121
	Appendix	135